Oct 27, 2017 3:51 PM Useful Answers (4) Thread Replies – more Gmail user options worry about losing emails and messages next door to try simple tips (Images: GOOGLE • GETTY)Google experiencing a large number of issues with authentication tools used with its Google Account, that triggers outrage overwhelmingly across a large number of its online web apps and services – from You to Google Maps, Google Meet to the Google Assistant used by Google Nest smart speakers that can be used to control smart light bulbs , Nest thermostat and security cameras. According to Google, the majority of its users have experienced issues yesterday. Since Gmail alone counts 1.5 billion users worldwide, there are a large number of people who have been affected. Thankfully, the worst is now behind us, with Gmail now back online after an hour or so on Monday December 14, 2020. Google has not confirmed whether regular services have resumed worldwide, but few people have reportedly been able to access their inbox again. However, users worry that the damage has caused messages sent or received during loss. Until we get confirmation from Google, we can't find out for sure that the distraction doesn't cause an email astray. However, that is not possible. The worst case, the sender should be told that the message could not be sent - allowing them to send the message again. If you send e-mail and aren't sure if it reaches the recipient that it means securely, check the Sent folder in the sidebar on the left side of Gmail to reset the message. Even if you run out of storage in Gmail, you won't be able to send or receive messages. However, this will not go away. Messages sent to you will be returned to the sender. Google offers some tips for those who worry about losing emails in their Gmail inbox. It recommends checking the following locations to make sure the message is sure to disappear• Check if the email is archived, deleted, or marked as spam. If so, the message will be filed deep in one of the categories on the left side of the screen. On mobile, you can type in anywhere into the search box to make sure that you look in archives, bins and spam folders as well as inbox when searching for missing correspondence. • Check if the email has been filtered. To do this, you need to load the Settings menu, then go to View All Settings > then Filter and Blocked Address tab. • Check if your email is forwarded to another account. Again, this is another revision that requires you to jump to the Settings menu. Click on the cog icon in the upper right corner to load Settings, then go to the Shipping and POP/IMAP tab. Below, in the Forward section, check if you've selected Forward copy of the incoming mail. If you have, select Save Gmail copy in the Inbox or a copy of Mark Gmail as read. • Check if you've read your Gmail email with another email client. Reading, archiving or deleting emails on third-party e-mail applications, such as Apple Mail or Microsoft Outlook, will affect your Gmail inbox. So, if you've accidentally deleted emails from your Apple Watch, or archived quick messages from notifications on Windows 10, then that'll explain why it's lost on Gmail as well. If this doesn't work and you use Gmail for work, school, or organization, contact your system administrator. They will be able to help. If you don't, that's it. Google doesn't offer any more information about restoring messages. Hopefully, that means it's not something that often happens – if at all. However, it may be worth tweeting a customer service account if you're still having a problem (they don't have a phone number that you can ring). SearchEsClear AppsMain menu In the Search mail bar, enter a unique word or phrase from a lost email. Move it to your Inbox when you find it. Find Spam, Trash, and All Mail folders for e-mail. Also, find social tabs, Promotions and Updates. Click More in the left menu pane to access all folders and tabs. Contact Google Support as the last resort. Whether you accidentally deleted the email, or if they disappeared for an unknown reason, follow these instructions to get a lost Google email. Stock Catalog/Flickr There are several reasons why Gmail's message might be lost. The most common reason is that users accidentally migrate or delete them, but forwards and filters can also cause e-mail to disappear. Forward: You can forward an email to another address without realizing it. Sign in to Gmail and select the gear icon in the top-right corner. Select View all settings, then select the Forward and POP/IMAP tabs. (Or go to: Any forwarding address will appear at the top of the screen. Delete that you don't want to forward. Filter: Filters instruct certain e-mail from your primary inbox to keep your messages organized. To Your filter settings, select the gear icon > View all settings > Filters and blocked addresses. (Alternatively, you can go directly to There are several ways to find missing They may have gone to spam, been archived or deleted, or something else. Check your spam. It's possible that missing emails have been captured by Gmail spam filters. Select Spam from the left menu pane. (You may need to scroll down and select More to reveal the Spam folder.) Browse the e-mail list in the Spam folder. If you find a missing email, select the check box next to it, then choose Non-spam. Emails marked as Spam remain in the Spam folder for 30 days and are then permanently deleted. Once deleted from the Spam folder, you won't be able to access lost emails. Check your rubbish bin. It's possible that your email disappeared accidentally sent to the trash bin. From the left menu pane, select More > Trash. If you find the email you're looking for, right-click it and select Move to the inbox. On the touchscreen, you can press and hold messages and then choose Move to E-mail inboxes sent to the Trash folder will be permanently deleted after 30 days. If you deleted the email more than 30 days ago, it disappeared forever. Check the social/promotion/update tab. Your missing email may be categorized as a promotional or social email, which has their own Inbox in Gmail. Choose either a Social, Promotions, or Update tab. If you want to migrate any of these emails to your primary inbox, simply click and drag the e-mail to the Primary inbox. Check your archive email. It's possible that emails are archived without you realizing it. Although this option will display all your e-mail in one inbox, it will also contain any messages that may have been archived. Use the Gmail search function. The email you are looking for may be buried under another email. Use Gmail's built-in search function to quickly find it by entering the subject of an email, recipient, original sender or body text. If you don't want to dig all your spam or Social email, you can use the search function in individual folders to shrink the results. Contact the Google support team. If no of the tips above work and you desperately need to find an email, the Google support team might be able to help. Although the service is usually reserved for hacked accounts or when an email has been maliciously deleted, it can sometimes dig up lost emails. Provide as much information about lost emails as you can, including the date you first realized that they were missing. Only emails that have been deleted in the last 30 days will be recoverable. Thanks for telling us! Tell us why! Why!
